Fake Facebook MidJourney AI page promoted malware to 1.2 million people

Hackers are using Facebook advertisements and hijacked pages to promote fake Artificial Intelligence services, such as MidJourney, OpenAl's SORA and ChatGPT-5, and DALL-E, to infect unsuspecting users with password-stealing malware.

The malvertising campaigns are created by hijacked Facebook profiles that impersonate popular AI services, pretending to offer a sneak preview of new features.

Users tricked by the ads become members of fraudulent Facebook communities, where the threat actors post news, Al-generated images, and other related info to make the pages look legitimate.
